

Marketing and Communications Lead

Easy Read job description and instructions on how to apply

Document 1- About the job

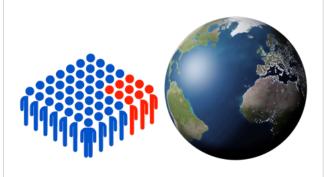

To apply for the job you must be deaf, disabled or neurodivergent.

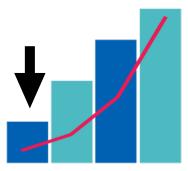

TripleC want to get applications from people who are underrepresented in their company. For example:

Deaf, disabled or neurodivergent people from the global majority.

Deaf, disabled and neurodivergent people from the LGBTQI+ community

And deaf, disabled and neurodivergent people from lower socio-economic backgrounds.

Global majority means people of Indigenous, African, Asian, or Latin American descent.

These people make up 85% of the world population.

LGBTQI stands for the identities lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans, queer and intersex.

The + sign includes other identities like asexual, non-binary, demisexual and two-spirit.

Socio-economic background is a way of describing people based on their income, education and type of job.

People from lower socio-economic backgrounds usually have less access to money, education, social activities and health resources.

The Marketing and Communications Lead job is for an employed (PAYE) contract.

The job is 3 days a week.

Sometimes there might be paid overtime.

This work will be agreed together by TripleC and the new Marketing and Communications Lead.

The job is for 3 months.

After 3 months TripleC will decide to keep on employing the new Marketing and Communications Lead or not.

The yearly salary for 3 days a week is £25,740.

This is equal to a full time salary of £42,900.

The Marketing and Communications Lead will work from home.

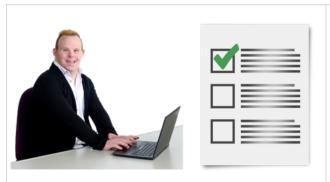

Their Department is Marketing and Communications.

They will report to the TripleC Senior Leadership Team.

The Marketing and Communications Lead's job includes:

Looking after TripleC's social media content

Creating TripleC's press releases and organising their media engagement

Making decisions about TripleC's marketing and branding

And advising on the design, content and updates of the TripleC website.

